

Footsteps of Jesus Update From Israel #3 Monday March 30

Dear Friends and Supporters

It has been so green and lush in Galilee that I am reluctant to leave for Jerusalem today. I have never seen the wild flowers so abundant. So I made one last outing for sunrise over the Sea of Galilee. From there I went up into the surrounding hills to video the incredible fields of wildflowers. I was constantly thinking of Jesus words to consider the lilies of the field how they

Lilies of the field in Galilee

While filming by the sea a fisherman came working his nets. This was an incredible treat as he caught several fish right here in Capernaum.

Fisherman at Capernaum

I then stopped in at Ginnosar where the first century Galilee boat was found back in the 1980s. Today it is on display in this fantastic museum.

Before leaving I went up for one last vantage look over the sea from the ancient city of Hippos, possibly the region of the Gadarenes and the story of the demons going into the swine.

Filming at Hippos looking over Sea of Galilee

I then returned for lunch and to pick up my new friend who was going to help me with the filming in Jerusalem and its environs. We were amazed at how the late rains had turned the Jordan Valley green. The contrast with the general brown nature of the area was breathtaking.

We arrived in Jerusalem late and settled in for the next four days of filming.

Please keep me in your prayers as I travel in Israel preparing video, still pictures, and commentary for "Tracing The Footsteps Of Jesus."

Shalom from the Land

Green Jordan Valley